

If Michael Powell, FCC chief, and The CBS network executives are so outraged by the Janet Jackson/Justin Timberlake "admitted accident" during the Superbowl then why hasn't someone said something about the episode of "Two and a Half Men" in which a woman bares her naked butt-cheeks in front of the young under-aged actor as he sits at the breakfast table and she reaches up-high for a cereal bowl? This show aired I believe last Sunday, Jan. 25th '04. In commercials promoting the show this particular segment is shown again and again. The show is aired during the prime time children watch television and the "flash of ass" was shown to an actor under the age of 18. I believe the actor who plays his father that being John Crier stated that his tv-son is 10 or 12. It smells like double-standards or hypocritical-standards to me. This show is broadcast by the way, on CBS.